Hi Everyone,

So much has happened at Laurel this past week! Our students have been busy working on their engineering projects in Dr. McKay's class, but today, for the first time, we had a showing of leprechaun catchers! They were all sizes and shapes and absolutely wonderful!

Yesterday we had an informative Tea With Dee, with an art roomful of Laurel parents. We discussed the assessments that we use at Laurel School, and how they help our teachers and our parents understand how our students are progressing in reading and math. If you have any topics that you wish to explore, please feel free to call and let us know and we will design a discussion that will enlighten us all.

Last night, many families attended the screening of Dislecksia: the Movie and met Harvey Hubbell V, the filmmaker. Harvey and his film crew came from their studio in Connecticut to show the film and broadcast our expert panel through a Facebook Live broadcast that was moderated by me. The humorous film was biographical, but highlighted top neuroscientist, including our own Dr. Sherman, about brain research related to dyslexia. Please help us by sharing the link to the event from our Laurel Facebook page with your contacts

Dee
